Case No. 08-CV-0764 BEN (NLS)

STATEMENT OF PLAINTIFF SECURITIES AND EXCHANGE COMMISSION IN REPOSE TO DEFENDANT MATTHEW LA
MADRID'S COUNSEL'S JULY 23, 2008
LETTER TO THE COURT

Plaintiff Securities and Exchange Commission ("Commission") provides this statement in response to the July 23, 2008 letter to the Court by Joseph N. Casas, counsel for defendant Matthew La Madrid ("La Madrid").

1 La Madrid's July 23 letter requests "clarification" of Paragraph XIII of this Court's May 2 16, 2008 Preliminary Injunction, which required La Madrid to prepare and deliver to the 3 Commission by May 21, 2008 a detailed and complete schedule of his assets, and purports to 4 explain why La Madrid has not complied with that requirement. The letter also suggests that the 5 Court address the issue of La Madrid's breach of Paragraph XIII at the August 11, 2008 hearing
6 of La Madrid's motion to stay this case.

7 La Madrid contends that he has not complied with Paragraph XIII of the Preliminary 8 Injunction because information included in the schedule of assets could tend to incriminate him.
9 This argument is, at the very least, overbroad. Assuming arguendo the accuracy of La Madrid's 10 claim that he "is unable to fully account for the provenance of his assets without revealing 11 potentially incriminating information . . .", such concerns provide no justification for his refusal 12 to provide any of the information the Court ordered him to produce. Even if "fully account[ing] 13 for the provenance" of his assets would raise Fifth Amendment concerns, there is much 14 information that could be provided without implicating such concerns. Yet La Madrid has 15 refused to provide any information whatsoever in response to the Court's order. See U.S. v.
16 Pierce, 561 F.2d 735, 740 (9th Cir. 1977) (Fifth Amendment assertions must be made on a 17 question-by-question, not blanket, basis).

18 Moreover, the fundamental premise of the July 23 letter is inaccurate. La Madrid 19 purports to rely on "changed circumstances" – primarily the purported "increase" in the U.S.
20 Attorney's Office's criminal investigation – to justify his refusal to comply with the Preliminary 21 Injunction. In truth, however, nothing has changed. The FBI executed a search warrant on La 22 Madrid's home before this action was even filed, and La Madrid was well aware that he was the 23 target of a criminal investigation. And as noted in the Commission's opposition to La Madrid's 24 motion to stay these proceedings, no indictment has been filed. Thus, La Madrid is in exactly the 25 same circumstances – circumstances largely of his own making – he was in when the 26 Preliminary Injunction was issued. Significantly, the Preliminary Injunction required that La 27 Madrid provide an accounting and schedule of assets within five days of its issuance. While La 28 Madrid's letter relies on generalities and carefully avoids discussing dates or other specifics, any

1 “changed circumstances” would be relevant to explain La Madrid’s non-compliance only if the 2 circumstances surrounding the criminal investigation changed significantly between May 16,
 3 2008 and May 21, 2008. La Madrid does not point to any meaningful changes in circumstance 4 during that five-day window, nor could he credibly do so.

5 Unfortunately, La Madrid and his counsel have been less than candid with the Court 6 when discussing the as-yet hypothetical criminal proceeding and their own legal gamesmanship 7 in this case. The only thing that has changed is La Madrid’s litigation strategy. He now seeks to 8 turn the inchoate criminal investigation to his tactical advantage, using overbroad references to 9 that investigation and his Fifth Amendment rights to buy time to further dissipate his hidden 10 assets and generally avoid scrutiny of his financial malfeasance. Indeed, by contending in his 11 briefs and declarations in support of the pending motion to stay that he has not secreted any 12 assets since April 1, 2008, La Madrid has opened the door and waived any privilege that might 13 have applied to that subject. See generally Jones v. United States, 296 F.2d 393, 404 (D.C. Cir.
 14 1961) (party who generally denies responsibility or culpability with respect to event or 15 transaction may not invoke Fifth Amendment to avoid cross-examination on relevant details).

16 Every day La Madrid is permitted to continue his campaign of stonewalling and evasion 17 further erodes the ability of the Commission and the Receiver to achieve meaningful relief for 18 the investors La Madrid robbed of their lives’ savings, retirement funds, home equity, and 19 children’s college funds. See First Interim Report of Receiver Stephen J. Donell at 16 20 (“Receiver’s document recovery efforts have been hampered by La Madrid’s failure . . . to 21 provide the Court with an accounting of his assets . . .) The Court should reject La Madrid’s 22 request that it bless his defiance of the Preliminary Injunction, just as it should reject the pending 23 motion to stay.

 25 DATED: August 5, 2008

Respectfully submitted,

26
